SciNoBo Taxonomy

Version 2

1. Introduction

This report provides an analysis of the new version of the taxonomy, addressing the issues identified by various stakeholders and detailing the steps taken to resolve them. The approach we employed is as follows:

- We started by cataloguing the issues within the existing taxonomy and grouping them into specific categories.
- To understand the taxonomy's structure and resolve these issues, we compared it with other well-established taxonomies, namely EuroSciVoc and Scopus.
- This analysis allowed us to identify missing elements, understand how other taxonomies tackle similar challenges, and pinpoint areas for improvement.
- Based on these insights, we made adjustments, including deletions, reorganization (changed the path of an FoS), and additions based on other taxonomies.

The changes between versions can be summarized numerically as follows:

| Version 1 |    |     |     |
|-----------|----|-----|-----|
| L0        | L1 | L2  | L3  |
| 6         | 43 | 176 | 594 |

| Version 2 |    |     |     |
|-----------|----|-----|-----|
| L0        | L1 | L2  | L3  |
| 6         | 40 | 220 | 560 |

One important convention for this document is that we refer to the Levels of the taxonomy starting with zero (i.e. L0 is the first level, L1 the second level and so on).

2. Issues and Cases Addressed

In this section, we list the different types of issues we encountered with the taxonomy revision process and the solution we employed to address them. These issues were categorized into four main cases, each representing a structural or conceptual issue within the existing taxonomy. The first case deals with Parent Nodes with Only One Child Node, where the taxonomy lacked sufficient complexity. The second case addresses Nodes with Child Nodes Sharing the Same Name as the Parent, where redundancy could potentially cause confusion. The third case focuses on Different Nodes with Child Nodes Sharing the Same Name, which led to ambiguities that hindered usability and navigation. Finally, we examine cases where the Taxonomy Stops at Level 2, highlighting instances of incomplete hierarchies.

2.1 Color Coded System

To keep the changes organized and clear, we used a color-coded system. This system categorizes the changes and highlights specific actions or statuses for each element. Below is an overview of each color and its corresponding meaning:

- Lilac: This color denotes elements that are pending decisions, under validation, or requiring expert review. These items are still in the process of being finalized and may undergo further revisions based on additional input.
- Green: Items marked in green indicate additions sourced from EuroSciVoc or Scopus. These are newly introduced elements that were integrated from external, taxonomies to enhance the SciNoBo's

- Yellow: Yellow signifies items that have been moved from other levels or paths within the SciNoBo taxonomy. These changes reflect reorganizations or reclassifications to ensure better alignment with the overall structure.
- Red: The red color represents elements removed entirely from the taxonomy. These entries have been deleted due to redundancy, irrelevance, or because they no longer fit within the updated structure.

2.2 Cases Review

In this section, we will delve into the issues within the taxonomy and provide an analysis of each issue. For every challenge, we will present the proposed adjustments and solutions developed for inclusion in version 2 of the taxonomy. By addressing these cases, we aim to enhance the taxonomy's structure, usability, and alignment with domain-specific needs.

A. Case 1: Parent Nodes with Only One Child Node

This issue arises when a parent node in the taxonomy has only a single child node, raising questions about its necessity and structural coherence. Below, we examine specific instances of this issue in SciNoBo V1 and how they were addressed or reconsidered in SciNoBo V2.

C1: Natural Sciences → Computer and Information Sciences → Computation Theory & Mathematics

|    | SciNoBo V1       |                                   |                                  |
| C1 | Natural sciences | Computer and information sciences | Computation Theory & Mathematics |
|    | SciNoBo V2       |                                   |                                  |
| C1 | Natural sciences | Computer and information sciences | Computation theory & mathematics |

This node has been flagged for further discussion due to a broader debate about whether Computer and Information Sciences should remain as an independent field or be incorporated under Engineering Fields. The difference between SciNoBo's current taxonomy and EuroSciVoc's approach underlines the need for expert input, as discussed further in Chapter 3.4.

C2: Agricultural and Veterinary Sciences → Agricultural Biotechnology → Food Science

|    |                                      |                            |              |

| C1 | Agricultural and veterinary sciences | Agricultural biotechnology | Food Science |

Food Science remains the only L2 under Agricultural Biotechnology. However, Food Science is being further developed in the lower levels of the taxonomy. Furthermore, neither EuroSciVoc nor Scopus taxonomies feature equivalent Fields of Science (FoS) in this area.

C3: Social Sciences → Media and Communications → Communication & Media Studies

|    | SciNoBo_V1      |                          |                               |

| C3 | Social sciences | Media and communications | Communication & Media Studies |

Like the abovementioned case, Communication & Media Studies is further developed at lower levels. Additionally, EuroSciVoc and Scopus do not have a similar category.

B. Case 2: Nodes with Child Nodes Sharing the Same Name as the Parent

This issue occurs when a child node shares the same name as its parent node. These cases hinder the taxonomy's comprehensiveness and introduce confusion. In SciNoBo_V2, these cases were addressed through a combination of additions, deletions, and reorganizations, often informed by comparisons with EuroSciVoc and Scopus taxonomies. Below are the respective cases and an explanation of how each case was handled:

C1: Engineering and Technology → Civil Engineering → Civil Engineering

|  | Engineering and technology | Civil engineering | Building &amp; Construction   |

By incorporating detailed subfields and moving some L3 nodes into L2 (yellow ones), the redundancy was resolved. Additionally, integration of EuroSciVoc elements enhanced coverage.

C2: Engineering and Technology → Chemical Engineering → Chemical Engineering

|    |                            |                      |                                             |

|    | Engineering and technology | Chemical engineering | Separation Technologies                     |

Some values have been moved from L3 to L2 (yellow ones), to resolve the redundancy. Also, some values have been added from the EuroSciVoc taxonomy to improve coverage.

|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering | Sanitation/Sewerage                 |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering | Hydrology/Hydraulic Engineering     |

In this case, some additions have been made from the EuroSciVoc taxonomy, and some values have been moved from L3 → L2 of the same field (Hydrology/Water And The Environment, Sanitation/Sewerage, Hydrology/Hydraulic Engineering). Finally, there has been a reassignment of L2 fields from the L1 field "Other Engineering and Technology" (Geological & Geomatics Engineering).

C4: Nano-Technology → Nanoscience & Nanotechnology → Nanoscience & Nanotechnology

It seems that the L2 category is more specific than its L1. This case has been marked lilac as we want to further discuss it with experts.

The lower level FoS of veterinary sciences have been moved to the 3rd level of the taxonomy. However, they have been marked lilac as we want to further discuss it with experts, to ensure the FoS are correct and cover a large portion of veterinary science.

Previously L3-level nodes were elevated to L2, marked with yellow. Terms marked green were drawn from EuroSciVoc. The FoS in the yellow changes are also flagged for further review, and possibly to be discussed with experts.

C. Case 3: Different Nodes with Child Nodes Sharing the Same Name

This case focuses on the challenges arising from duplicate child nodes under different parent nodes, which can cause confusion, redundancy, and inefficiency in our taxonomy. Below, we analyze the problem and solutions for each instance.

C1: Engineering and Technology → Environmental Biotechnology vs. Environmental Engineering

|    |                            |                             |                                     |

|    | SciNoBo V1                 |                             |                                     |
| C1 | Engineering and technology | Environmental biotechnology | Environmental Engineering           |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Environmental Engineering           |
|    | SciNoBo V2                 |                             |                                     |
| C1 | Engineering and technology | Environmental biotechnology | Biosensing                          |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental biotechnology | Bioremediation                      |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Carbon capture engineering          |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Natural resources management        |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Geological & geomatics engineering  |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Hydrology/Water and the environment |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Sanitation/Sewerage                 |
|    | Engineering and technology | Environmental engineering   | Hydrology/Hydraulic engineering     |

In this case, we deleted “Environmental Engineering” at the 3rd level since it also exists at the 2nd level. Furthermore, we moved fields within the taxonomy from other subfields to this one (yellow changes). Also, there were additions from EuroSciVoc, and certain terms (Bioremediation) require further discussion as they exist elsewhere in the taxonomy (e.g. Bioremediation also exists as a 4th level FoS). These terms need validation to determine where they fit best.

C2: Agricultural and Veterinary Sciences → Food Science

|    |                                      |                             |              |
|----|--------------------------------------|-----------------------------|--------------|
|    | SciNoBo V1                           |                             |              |
| C2 | Agricultural and veterinary sciences | Other agricultural sciences | Food Science |

|    |                                      |                             |              |
|----|--------------------------------------|-----------------------------|--------------|
|    | Agricultural and veterinary sciences | Agricultural biotechnology  | Food Science |
|    | SciNoBo_V2                           |                             |              |
| C2 | Agricultural and veterinary sciences | Agricultural biotechnology  | Food Science |
|    | Agricultural and veterinary sciences | Other agricultural sciences | Food Science |

This is a straightforward solution, as the L1 "Other Agricultural Sciences" is becoming obsolete. Its L2 categories were moved to more specific L1s. Consequently, the duplicate entry under this L1 was deleted, resolving the issue.

C3: Medical and Health Sciences → Overlapping Disciplines

This has been one of the most challenging cases. We have sought expert assistance, providing them with all three taxonomies—ours, EuroSciVoc, and Scopus—to develop an inclusive structure. This is the reviewed version, keeping all the important fields where they best fit.

The duplicate entry for "Criminology" under the more general L2 "Other Social Sciences" was deleted. It was retained under the more specific L2 "Law," resolving the redundancy.

D. Case 4: The Taxonomy Stops at Level 2

This case involves extending a taxonomy that previously stopped at Level 2 by adding more specific subfields to create greater depth and detail.

1. Deleted Fields from L1

Fields under L1 were removed because they were deemed redundant or overly general.

2. Deleted Fields That Exist Elsewhere

In this type, the deleted fields were redundant because they existed in more appropriate or specific locations within the taxonomy.

3. Deleted Fields That Do Not Exist Elsewhere

Fields in this category were removed entirely from the taxonomy because they were either obsolete, overly broad, or not deemed necessary for inclusion in the updated structure. These deletions were evaluated to ensure they did not impact the comprehensiveness of the taxonomy.

4. Deleted Fields from L2-L3

These fields were removed from deeper levels of the taxonomy. Often, they were highly niche topics that were either redundant or outside the intended scope of the taxonomy.

3.2 YELLOW

YELLOW changes represent fields that have been moved within the taxonomy. These movements are aimed at ensuring better alignment and logical organization of topics, either by relocating them to more suitable positions or by promoting them to higher levels.

2. L2 Moved Inside the Taxonomy, Promoted to L1

In this type of change, an L2 field was deemed significant enough to be elevated to L1 status. This reflects its broader importance.

3. L3 Moved Inside the Taxonomy

These changes involve relocating L3 fields within the taxonomy. The goal is to group them under more relevant or logically fitting L2 categories.

4. L3 Moved Inside the Taxonomy, Promoted to L2

This type involves L3 fields that were upgraded to L2 status due to their broader scope or increased relevance within the updated taxonomy. Furthermore, most of the times their parent was deleted (refer to section 3.1.3).

3.3 GREEN

GREEN changes represent fields that were introduced into the taxonomy, sourced directly from the EuroSciVoc or Scopus taxonomies. These additions are made at the L2 level to enhance the taxonomy's comprehensiveness and to include underrepresented areas of science.

All green changes involve new L2 fields brought into the taxonomy.

3.4 LILAC

Lilac signifies fields or areas within the taxonomy that are under review for various reasons, such as overlapping definitions, unclear boundaries, or the need for expert input. These changes often involve discussions around categorization, relevance, or whether certain fields should exist at all.

Defining Boundaries: Is Computer Science a Distinct Field or Part of Engineering?

This issue examines whether Computer Science should stand as a distinct L1 field within the taxonomy or remain categorized under Engineering. The decision hinges on whether the discipline's theoretical and applied aspects justify its independence or whether its close integration with engineering principles warrants its inclusion under the broader engineering domain. Further discussion and expert input are required to clarify its proper placement.

Post-Validation Review: Determining Which Fields Should Remain

This case involves evaluating the L2 fields under specific L1 domains to determine whether all listed L2s are relevant, complementary, and appropriately categorized. Some L2s may clash, lack alignment, or appear inconsistent in specificity. The goal is to refine and validate these relationships through a semi-automatic validation process or with expert guidance, ensuring the taxonomy maintains coherence and logical structure.

Finding the Right Fit: Positioning Environmental Biotechnology within L2 Domains

This case focuses on determining the most appropriate placement for Environmental Biotechnology within the taxonomy's L2 structure. As this field spans multiple interdisciplinary areas, it raises questions about its alignment with related domains. Expert input and validation tools will play a key role in resolving its placement effectively.

Should Industrial Engineering Stand Alone? Evaluating Its Position as an L1 Field

This case explores whether Industrial Engineering warrants its own designation as an L1 field within the taxonomy. Given its interdisciplinary nature and overlap with other engineering domains, the question arises whether it should remain embedded within broader categories or be elevated to a standalone field. This evaluation will involve considering the field's specificity, connections to other areas, and its prominence in academia and industry. Expert insights will guide this decision to ensure clarity and coherence in the taxonomy.

Seeking Expert Insights: Could These L2-L3 Go Under the L1 "Industrial Engineering" If This L1 Is Created?

This case focuses on evaluating whether specific L2-L3 fields align with the proposed L1 category of Industrial Engineering. The fields under review span topics such as Operations Research, Risk Analysis, and Sustainable Energy, highlighting the broad interdisciplinary nature of industrial engineering. If this L1 is established, these subfields may fit well under it, but consideration is needed to avoid misclassification. Expert feedback and analysis of thematic relevance will help determine the most logical placements for these fields within the taxonomy.

Seeking Expert Insights: Addressing Why L1 Fields Appear Less Specific Than Their L2 Subfields

In this case, we examine why this L1 field, appears broader or less specific compared to their L2 subfield, Nanoscience & Nanotechnology. This discrepancy raises questions about whether the L1 captures the specificity and scope of its subfields. Expert guidance will be essential in resolving whether adjustments to the structure or terminology are needed.

Deleted: designation adequately

Deleted: Clarifying the relationship between L1 and L2 levels is essential to ensure that the taxonomy hierarchy remains coherent and that higher-level categories provide meaningful context for their subfields.

Seeking Expert Insights: Should This L3 Be moved Under This L2?

This case examines whether the L2 Design Practice & Management and its associated L3 3D Printing/Structural Engineering could be placed under the L1 Architecture. The concern lies in whether this hierarchical arrangement aligns conceptually, or if the L2 and L3 would be better positioned under a different L1 category that more accurately reflects their scope and focus. Expert feedback is necessary to evaluate if their inclusion under Architecture maintains logical consistency within the taxonomy.

Are These Fields Useful?

This case raises a general concern about the relevance and necessity of specific L2 levels within the taxonomy. The aim is to evaluate whether these fields add meaningful value. Determining their usefulness involves assessing their distinctiveness, applicability, and alignment with the overall taxonomy goals. Feedback from experts will guide our decision about retaining, merging, or removing these fields.

Deleted: Seeking Expert Insights: Could These L2-L3 Fields Fit Under a More Specific L1?

This case focuses on whether the L2 Optoelectronics & Photonics could be more effectively categorized under a more specific L1 field rather than its current placement. The aim is to determine if there is a more precise overarching category that better encapsulates these fields' technical and conceptual focus. Expert insights are needed to refine the taxonomy's structure and ensure alignment with subject matter relevance.

4. Conclusion and Future Steps

Conclusion

This report serves to outline the changes introduced in the second version of the taxonomy. It provides explanations of the updates, organized by the color-coded categories used throughout the document, and highlights areas that remain under review or require further expert input. By clarifying the adjustments made, we aim to offer a comprehensive understanding of how the taxonomy has evolved.

Next Steps

As we move forward, our primary focus is on developing and implementing a semi-automatic validation approach powered by large language models (LLMs). This method will help identify edge cases where subcategories may not align with their parent categories, enabling us to manually address and resolve these discrepancies.

This system will play a pivotal role in reviewing the Taxonomy and ensuring consistency, accuracy, and alignment across all levels and categories. The system will also help in streamlining final validation, by automating the identification of inconsistencies or overlaps to simplify the refinement process.
